Frank Beats Coleman

The local tennis players drove to Coleman on Saturday last and gave the players at the west end of The Pass a severe wallop. There were twenty sets played and Frank won eighteen of them. Frank has easily the best players in The Pass and has several times beaten the "all stars" of Coleman.

Frank Tennis Players

A. V. Lang and S. Shone hereby challenge R. B. Buchanan and W. L. Clark, to a game of tennis to be played on neutral ground—ad Lethbridge, if necessary—each side to put up $25 and the winning money to be given to some charitable institution.

The Allies Storming the Fort

Dr. Warnock, the Liberal Standard Bearer, to the Electors of the Federal District of Macleod

GENTLEMEN—

Having accepted nomination as the Liberal standard bearer to the forthcoming election, and being an enthusiastic believer in the benefits to be derived from the reciprocity pact with the United States, I desire to place before you a few reasons why the cause I support should receive your endorsement at the polls.

In December, 1910, the farmers of Canada sent a large delegation to Ottawa and before the government their demands relative to measures for the benefit of the farming interests, and a reciprocal agreement with the United States was one of the most important measures suggested.

About the same time the United States government sent representatives to Ottawa and announced that they were prepared to enter into negotiations with a view to arranging a reciprocal trade agreement, with the result that the reciprocity pact now before the people of Canada was reached and the approaching election is a referendum as to whether that agreement shall or shall not become law.

It is a well known fact that farm products, wheat, barley, oats, hay, flax, cattle and horse manure, meat, butter, and other products of the farm are sold at lower prices in the United States than in Canada, and with the duty removed you will have free access to the markets of the south and reap the advantage of higher prices for your products.

Access, duty free, to a new market of ninety million people, is what this reciprocal trade arrangement means and it is for the farmer to say whether he will accept or decline the offer put before him by the government.

The reciprocity agreement also provides for a considerable reduction on the duties of agricultural implements and this will enable the farmer to save money on his purchases of the many farm implements.

As a member of the United Farmers Association of Alberta I endorse the platform of that organization, and if sent to Ottawa as your representative I shall do everything in my power to bring about a further substantial reduction of the duty on agricultural implements at the earliest possible date.

The farmers of Canada through a deputation sent to Ottawa asked for reciprocity and those of you who follow the debate in The House know that but for the opposition of the Conservative party, reciprocity would now be in force and we should be getting the benefits. If you vote for the Liberal party and return that party to power you will have the agreement ratified just as soon as the parliament can be re-assembled.

As has been already pointed out, the Conservative party is opposed to this measure and by supporting their candidate you are assisting to elect that party to power and therefore assisting to destroy the reciprocal agreement.

The powerful industrial and financial interests of the east are opposed to the agreement and if the Conservatives get into power these interests will dictate the policy of that party and tariff reduction will be impossible.

Reciprocity also means much to the consumers of Canada and is worthy of their support. The fact that many local mills can be imported free of duty from the United States should appeal to the consumers of this country who are anxious to see the cost of living reduced.

Liberal Meeting at Frank

On Tuesday night the usual weekly meeting of the Frank Liberal Association was held in the committee rooms, Dominion avenue. The president of the association, Mr. Harvey Murphy presided. The room was crowded, many being unable to gain admittance and had to be content with listening from the sidewalks and the middle of the street to the very eloquent address of the president on current politics. Mr. Murphy based his address on statements that were made by Mr. H. Lyons at Mr. Palmer's meeting at Blairmore and Mr. Horton's meeting at Frank.

Mr. Harvey Murphy in a rapid and interesting manner showed his hearers what the Liberal governments both federal and provincial had done for the great toiling masses of Western Canada. The passing of the 8-hour law for miners and the appointment of the railroad commission to enquire into the grievances of shippers and any other who had claims on the railroad companies. The extravagance and class legislation of the Conservative party when they were in power were shown up by the speaker and he finished up a fine peroration by asking his hearers what John Heron had ever done for them either inside or outside the House of Commons during the seven years he had represented this riding in parliament. Had he ever lifted up his voice to help the western provinces to obtain the control of their natural resources. Had he ever done anything to help the miners to obtain a technical education, to help them to pass the examinations for licenses, licenses, pit bosses and mine managers certificates. He concluded his splendid address by urging his hearers if they wanted reforms to vote for the Liberal nominee, Dr. Warnock.

Mr. W. Gresham, J.P., also addressed the meeting and his remarks on the misrepresentation of the Conservative party in this riding were well received. At the close of the meeting it was decided to hold a smoker in the Miners' Hall, at that place was obtainable, on Monday evening next. Everybody is invited no matter what is their political faith.

He Was Willing to Oblige a Friend

By AGNES G. BROGAN
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Dick thrust against his friend upon the street. "Hello, Bob," he cried joyously. "The very person I wanted to see!"

The young man addressed looked up at him. "What is it, Dick? You're asked frankly."

Dick laughed. "Oh, a sort of social benefit," he answered. "Claire and I are off to Beersburg tomorrow, and we are leaving our room up on Riverside with all our worldly goods endowed in the mercy of middle-aged and unmercantile, who we have learned to our sorrow are not to be trusted."

"Well," his friend inquired as he passed for breath, "what's the answer?"

"I am coming to that," Dick continued. "Now, the place where you live is mighty hot these August days, while the breeze from over the Bluffs blows ever fresh and cool through our windows. Why can't you come up there tonight and make yourself at home, at least two nights a week?" he quickly answered Bob's surprised stare.

"In short," his friend answered slowly, "I am in play with a woman in return for my lodgings."

Dick grinned. "And you might feed my pet guinea pig and my goldfish," he added. "I'll leave the food beside the bowl. The maid promised to attend to that part, but the truth is we'd just as soon didn't enter the house. Claire has been mistaking things lately, and—"

"I see," said Bob. "Well, I will oblige you, but I don't believe in anything else. Don't hesitate to mention it. His tone was sarcastic, but the man smiled back warmly, as it parted.

It was several days, however, before Bob recollected the empty apartment house. "Well, he would go and have it over," Claire greeted him in her charming, hostile way, and Dick wrung his hands, heavily.

"Come," they said, "and let us thank you."

"That seemed not to notice Bob's stare," he said, "but I'm convinced of their trip. Presently Claire arose and, rustled from the room. "Dear me," she said, "I've almost forgotten Kitty!"

The returned in a moment, her arm about the waist of a girl whose eyes danced and whose cheeks glowed as Bob sprung to his feet and bowed to her for this vision in clinging white. He was undoubtedly the friend.

"Kitty, dear," Claire was saying, "I want you to meet Dick's friend, Mr. Brewster. Bob, this is my cousin, Miss Alayne, and now that we have you both here," she settled on, "we want to thank you for your kind offer of things during our absence. Kitty's pet is positively fat. When I asked her to feed it, she said, 'I don't like that idea. Dick had already coaxed Bob to do that service.'"

"I don't like to play night watchman," Dick interposed. "He has done so for the furniture is still intact. Let's go to bed, please."

Mrs. Brewster smiled. "Oh, yes, we will," she said, "and I'll say anything about it, but Kitty insists upon a full and free confession. I certainly forgot to mention that you gave me as a wedding gift, Dick, and when we arrived at Beersburg, I remembered that it still reposed in the cabinet drawer at home, a glittering temptation to that thiefing maid of mine, and I wrote post-haste, special delivery, telling Kitty to secure the pin and send it with her brother. But when he came down to see the week end, I brought her to keep it hidden, while Bob grew up, and I did not dare to let you know, Dickie, until the pendant was safe in my pocket."

Claire laughed. "Dick," she said, "you should have told me that Bob was so careful. Kitty has now explained it would have been if he and Kitty had not been feeding the guinea pig."

Kitty looked at her cousin reproachfully. "I told you to keep it safe," she said. "I thought of my predicament if Mr. Brewster had caught me with it. I was departing with that pin of yours. If he would probably have considered it his duty to have me over to the police, and I should have been locked up in a cell like a suffragette."

"That's all right," said Kitty, "but I don't like to have you freed from Claire answered caressingly. "Here come the suits. Let's all take a ride!"

"Certainly not," Bob responded. "I intend to start a series of applications, dating from tonight, when you are all here, and I shall be disappointed to have you absent."

And Kitty smiled demurely. "Miss is a forgetting lady," she said.

Vainly he searched the rooms and corridors, coming out at last protesting upon the street. A basket was at the entrance, and inside it stood the maid. As she advanced toward the ward her hand to the handle of the cab and quickly crossed to the long row of benches which lined the roadway. She looked up, white as a sheet, and her eyes were fixed upon the girl.

"He intended to be pitiless, but found it a difficult matter to find a child, as she fixed upon him."

"You remember her?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," she answered, "you are the man who came for Mr. Brewster's room."

Bob smiled drily. "I happen to be Mr. Brewster's friend," he said, "and, as I am in charge of his belongings, you must tell me why you look a discomfited pendant from the cabinet drawer a short time ago."

"Oh, please do not ask me about it," she begged, "for I cannot tell you."

"See here," he said desperately, "you replace the pin and no one shall ever know about it."

She stood up before him, and her voice trembled. "I cannot do that," she said. "I did not take the pin for myself."

"You mean," he exclaimed, "that you have already given it to another person?"

She nodded vigorously, then placed her hand upon his arm. "I am sure you suspect you of stealing the pin," she said slowly. "I will see to that—that is, if you will."

Perhaps she had been goaded on to take the pin by some very pressing need, and she was now, in a moment of crisis, about to confess it.

"I will see to that—that is, if you will," she said, "I will see to that—that is, if you will."

Rev. T. M. Murray

Addresses the Guild

Rev. T. M. Murray, of Coleman, gave an interesting lecture on "Missions," at the regular meeting of the Guild held on Monday evening in the Presbyterian church.

It was missionary night and the subject was a very appropriate one. The speaker handled the subject in an able manner and did justice to the time at his disposal. The reverend gentleman dwelt principally on Africa and its 180 million people, on India, which has a population of over 300 million, China and its 400 million souls and Japan with its 52 million people.

The next meeting of the Guild will be taken charge of by the devotional committee.

The Rise and Fall of the Catalogue

A few years ago the large mail order houses in the United States ruined hundreds of small towns. These towns were at one time thriving communities with several business houses and hundreds of prosperous inhabitants. But the catalogue was placed in their homes and a wave of mail order purchases swept over the people with the result that the local merchants went out of business. The farmers were among the guilty ones, and on their heads fell the first punishment, their home market being lost.

The farmers at last opened their eyes to the cause, began to patronize the home merchants and to cut out the mail order houses. The result was inevitable, and today the small towns are thriving business places. One of those towns in particular once had a population of something over a thousand people; business houses were empty, scores of vacant buildings were almost hidden by weeds and the mail order houses did a land office business in that town; adjoining farm land was selling at $50 to $80 per acre, and very little was changing hands at that. The farmers woke up and to-day there is no better town of its size in the State; new public buildings have been erected and the residential part is built up with modern houses; land is selling from $75 to $100 per acre and every one is prosperous. Not a dozen packages of mail order goods go into town in a month and those who do get them once in a while, sneak to the depot at night after the goods—they are ashamed to let people know about it.—Traders' Gazette.

Over Thirty Miners

Working at Blairmore

Several more men have been taken on at the Blairmore mine this week and there are now over thirty working there. Twelve big, hearty coal diggers came in from Coleman on Monday evening and sought work at the West Canadian Collieries mine. Suitable accommodations have since been provided for them and they are now engaged in mining the "black diamonds."

A large number of miners from Coleman and other places have asked for work at the mines here and the management report that they can get all the help they require. More miners will be taken in shortly, and the old activity will soon be resumed.

On the dreary days of rain and snow have passed and once again the calm and peaceful sunny days have come. Let us all hope that the dull days of the strike and struggle will soon pass and we will again enjoy the busy, prosperous times as of old.

Election Reports Will be

Received at Opera House

Telegraphic reports of the political battle will be received over the wire at the Blairmore opera house, on Thursday evening next. The C. P. R. telegraph wire is being strung along from the station to the opera house so that reports may be received constantly and given out before an anxious crowd immediately they are received.

Those that are fond of applause while they pursue it, how little do they taste it when they have it. South.

What the Conservatives Would do if Given the Chance

"Just as the Conservative party has succeeded in fighting its way into some degree of favor with the country, and reaching a point where victory may possibly be achieved, along comes Mr. George Taylor, former chief Conservative whip, with an ill-considered remark in the House of Commons that 'it would be better for the Government to drive the strikers to work at the point of the bayonet.'

It is just blithering blather, like this blundering use, who keep the Conservative party on the bum. This outrageous remark will be used with fatal effect by the Grits at the ensuing elections. The labor element on the prod is no joke when seats have to be won."

"I have a world of confidence in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for I have used it with perfect success," writes Mrs. I. Basford, Poolerville, Md. For sale by all dealers.

Church of England Has a Good Worker

The congregations in Coleman, Frank and Blairmore are once more being organized. The new rector, Leslie Fordham, arrived two weeks ago and is fast making friends. He contemplates holding services alternately in the afternoon at Frank and Blairmore and two services each Sunday in Coleman. The services which he has conducted are brief, bright and brotherly. Mr. Fordham has had a large experience in church work and shows every prospect of proving a popular pastor.

The afternoon service will be held in Frank Methodist church on Sunday next at 3.15 o'clock, when Mr. Fordham hopes to have the sympathy of all those who are interested in the welfare of the Church of England services.

ERRATUM

The item in Blairmore notes regarding C. of E. services is not correct. That page was printed before the mistake was discovered.

We were agreeably surprised to hear the Frank orchestra at the Paul Gilmore comedy drama in Blairmore on Friday night. The musicians must be congratulated on their rendering such inspiring music and we hope we may soon see the Frank boys on a par with any of the orchestras in any of our larger cities.

For bowel complaints in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil. It is certain to effect a cure and when reduced with water and sweetened is pleasant to take. No physician can prescribe a better remedy. For sale by all dealers.
